300		Smallsea Town Hall Dollhouse - This building started as antique Belgian dollhouse crafted as a merchant's house The carving over the door, in old Flemish, relates to this. It was bought at an auction in the UK by the Birnbergs and then adapted into Smallsea's Town Hall. Though very old, it had been crudely electrified by the previous owner. An effort was made to rewire but this would have damaged the structure. Wherever it was possible, the existing system was used. Extensive work was done to bring the rooms to life as the center of Smallsea. Of special note is the council meeting room on the first floor and court room on the second floor. For Town Hall, many items are custom made including the terrific Mayor, Council members and the Court Room dolls.	500 3000

431		Aurelie's Ladies' Dress Shop Bldg - This was the second structure in the Smallsea Collection. It started with a two buildings bought at the Singing Tree in London. Both were made by Honeychurch Dollshouses UK. The two buildings were joined together, in part, to be part of what would become a much larger street scene and eventually, Smallsea Museum. Carol Olsen and Leon Pitt (retired) of Think Small in Chicago used their skills, imagination and expertise to execute Diane Birnberg's vision for the building. Mme. Aurelie's ladies dress shop has two floors: the entry and accessories shop and upstairs the showroom for bespoke clothing. The second floor of the dress shop connects to the second floor of the adjoining building in order to add a workroom for seamstresses. On the lower floor of the adjoining building is Fox and Sons Grocer. Approximately 90% of the Grocer's items, including the terrific casework, was made by UK artists bought from the Singing Tree, The London Dollhouse Company and the Kensington Dollshouse Festival. The collection for the ladies' dress shop was acquired over many years from UK and US artists. Dolls for both buildings are especially fine examples of UK and US doll makers.	1000 3000

589		The Explorers' Club Dollhouse - The Explorers' Club is a one of a kind building , designed, wired and built by the Birnbergs. The inspiration came from a private tour the Birnbergs took of the Royal Geographic Society in London with an extensive collection based on British exploration in the 19th and early 20th centuries. The building started with the acquisition of an Eric Landsdowne dollhouse cabinet which became, after some slight decorative alterations, the facade of the building. Taking over two years to plan and build, it is double side with access from the front and back to the five floors. The floors are laid out as follows: the basement with a kitchen, scullery, servants hall and access to transformers for electricity; the first floor- entry hall and special exhibit room (The Egyptian Exhibit); the second floor - the "Upside Monkey Bar" (named after a panel of wallpaper was applied upside by mistake) and the members' dining room; the third floor: the members' library and lecture area: the third floor - the game room and 2 members' bedrooms; and the fourth floor- attic. The interior of the Explorers' Club included the most extensive collection of artist made and custom made dolls and items of any building in Smallsea.
